"The energy in the room was amazing," Soto said. "Schools were showing a ton of school spirit, some of the schools brought their own shirts, they brought their mascots, it was just a very fun way to kick off the school year."

Students also participated in the convocation, with cheerleaders from Sullivan performing and some students leading the pledge of allegiance and closing out the celebration.

Soto felt this was a great way to set the tone and direction for the school year.

Additionally, Soto is pleased with how smoothly transportation has been going so far this school year.

"This time of year we're normally hearing about a lot of transportation issues and things like that, and our transportation team definitely worked really hard to plan the routes and we got off to a really smooth start," Soto said.

He expressed his gratitude toward Mayor Joshua Garcia, other local mayors, state senators and state representatives, who all worked on resolving the issues with the PVTA staff before it could impact schools.

"We were able to avoid something that really could've been very disruptive, especially to our two high schools, particularly those students who don't live in Holyoke but rely on PVTA transportation to get to schools," Soto said.

The only issue Soto brought forward in the meeting was concerns with enrollment levels in schools.

"We are experiencing some tight classes at Kelly school in some grades, in their SEI classes," Soto said. "There are some grades that are already capped."

Lawrence school is also experiencing difficulty with tight classrooms, and the fourth grade has been capped.

They will be continuing to monitor the issue weekly. If they do get more students for capped grade levels, then they would help students to get to other schools in the district that can take them in.

Despite this, overall, Soto and other committee members are happy with the start of the school year.

Student Representative Evan Kennedy has also noticed a positive shift in this school year, and he looks forward to seeing it continue.

"I've noticed that this year does feel very different and I think that has to do with the fact that we got some new staff and maybe it's not adding to the population of teachers but it is maybe helping some spaces where students were not the most comfortable and now we have a really good teacher," Kennedy said. "I think that so far this year is starting out very strong."
